It's a fairly basic two-person dance step, created in 1965 by Swing legend Buddy Schwinmer with his sister, based on the surfer stomp. It's usually danced to ballads with a steady four-count beat. The "nightclub" label comes from the way the dance is confined to a single, compact space on the dance floor, with a few moves added to allow you to travel a short distance when necessary - perfect for crowded nightclub floors. It's also ideal for Weddings, Valentine's Day dances, Homecoming Dances, Proms, or just impressing your date with the fact that you know how to dance without needing to weigh you down with too many moves. This dance should not be confused with the Texas two-step, which is a very different dance with different music.
